Jerusalem Post Staff and Agencies
The newspaper said that it has received clarification from the U.S. number of points in the working paper for reconvening the Middle East peace conference. The Syrians also said that the U.S. and the Soviet Union have reached Damascus with replies to the joint Middle East peace conference statement issued at the beginning of the month.

Liberation Organization, which Israel demanded be removed in the revised version of the original working paper presented to Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan in Washington.

The newspaper was commenting on Wednesday's speech by Egyptian Foreign Minister Imad Fahmy, who said that President Anwar Sadat had requested a number of amendments to the U.S. working paper.

Wolf Blitzer writes from Washington:

The U.S. is still working towards reconvening the Geneva conference in the third week of December, despite Egypt's request for revisions in the working paper.

U.S. sources yesterday said that they never expected Egypt to officially approve the paper as it read. It was always assumed that the Egyptians as well as the Syrians and the Jordanians would come forward with requests for some amendments and modifications.

But the sources stressed that the Egyptian reply was not one that would indicate a dead-end to the talks.

Senator Richard Stone, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on the Near East, said however that the initial Egyptian response indicates that the Soviet Union "failed to deliver," despite the U.S.-Soviet statement on the Middle East.

State Department Spokesman Hodding Carter yesterday declined to discuss details of the Egyptian reply. He said the U.S. does not believe that its efforts to reconvene the Geneva conference "are beset by discussing the contents or timing of the various responses on this paper."

The spokesman added that the U.S. remains "determined to do all possible to have the Geneva conference reconvened by the end of this year. At this sensitive stage, this end is best served through quiet diplomacy."

American hostage reveals terrorists treated Jews on hijacked plane

WILLIAM TOOTH
London Post News Service
FURT — A naturalized American grandfather rescued in a German commando raid hijacked Lufthansa jet in told reporters here how the s had discriminated against Jewish passengers, slapping and threatening to execute.

long harangues about what the Israelis and Jews had done to his people, the Palestinians.

"Then he collected the passports to see if anybody was Jewish," she said, and then he checked all Jewish.

"He checked every piece of jewelry and every watch to see if it was a Jewish Star," she said.

"The terrorist leader then read off names of three women who he said were Jewish," Mrs. Santiago said, apparently because they had Stars of David on their jewelry.

He announced that the three presumed Jewish girls would be executed at 8 o'clock the following morning — which, according to Mrs. Santiago, was three hours away.

But, when he came in that morning, he changed his mind.

"He said, to show you that I am a freedom fighter, I am not going to execute these three girls."

"Then he found a watch on the copilot with a Jewish Star on it. He stepped on it and broke it. We had to swear and promise we would never buy anything with a Jewish Star on it."

Mrs. Santiago spoke of the suspense that the three Jewish girls must have undergone, declaring: "I don't know what they went through for those three hours when he said at 8 o'clock he was going to kill them. I felt so sorry for them," and she again began to weep.

She said that afterwards, while he never again threatened the Jewish girls specifically with execution, "he slapped them around." The terrorist leader also punished others of the 88 hostages around when he was in a bad mood.

Mrs. Santiago then went on to describe, at great length, the brutal "execution" of Capt. Juergen Schumann after the plane landed in Aden. Schumann had told the terrorists that the undergarments had been damaged when South Yemen officials obliged him to land on an unpaved runway, and he was permitted to leave the plane in check.

But about a half hour later, Mrs. Santiago said, the terrorist leader announced to the passengers: "Your Captain Schumann. See what he did — he ran away to the enemy and let

DMC votes to join coalition after stormy Council debate

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Council of the Democratic Movement for Change last night approved its Executive's recommendation to join the ruling coalition.

The Council resolved this just before midnight by a vote of 86 to 46, with two abstentions, after a stormy five-hour debate at Beit Sokolow here.

The addition of the DMC to the coalition will give the government a comfortable majority of 78 in the 120-member Knesset. So far it could rely on only 63 votes.

The DMC council will meet again at 7 p.m. on Sunday at Beit Sokolow to elect members to the ministerial posts the government has offered it.

The DMC's decision appeared a foregone conclusion yesterday morning when the movement's leaders met their future coalition partners at the Prime Minister's office.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich, Industry Minister Yigal Hurvitz and Arye Dulzin of the Likud, Yehuda Ben-Meir of the National Religious Party, Rabbi Shlomo Lorincz of Agudat Yisrael and the DMC's Yigael Yadin, Shmuel Tamir and Meir Amit quickly agreed that the Likud offers, made last month, were accepted.

The participants also agreed to form subcommittees to decide which Knesset committees the DMC will head (now it heads the State Control Committee, a post traditionally reserved for the opposition).

Yadin told reporters the idea will also decide on DMC participation in ministerial committees. Yadin will be a member of the Ministerial Committee on Security and head the Ministerial Committee on Society and Social Betterment, but other details are still to be worked out.

The DMC leader said he will also ask to be responsible for the Broad-

Nissim, Goldenberg now out of cabinet

The DMC's decision to join the government means that advocate Amnon Goldeberg, who had been offered the Justice portfolio, and Moshe Nissim, who had been elected the Liberal Party's fourth minister, will not assume these posts.

But Liberal MK Avraham Shafir yesterday suggested co-opting Nissim to the cabinet as Minister responsible for contacts with the Knesset.

Ehrlich approved the initiative, but Shafir conceded this is a "delicate" matter. The appointment would change the balance of power between the coalition partners and also among the three Likud factions.

Begin reassures Agudat Yisrael

Agudat Yisrael's endorsement of the agreement with the DMC was expected to follow Begin's undertaking yesterday that all coalition partners will abide by the agreement the original partners — the Likud, the National Religious Party and Agudat Yisrael — signed on June 19.

Begin gave these assurances to the chairman of Agudat Yisrael's Central Committee, Rabbi Menachem Pinhas Alter, and to MKs Rabbis Yehuda Meir Abramowitz, Moshe Elimelech and Shlomo Lorincz who called at his office.

The Prime Minister's undertaking was later published in an official communiqué stating that "all undertakings the government made in the coalition agreement of the 3rd of Tammuz 5737 are firm and binding and will be honored by the entire government."

Robber nabs plane to see friend

ATLANTA. — A suspected Georgia bank robber hijacked a Frontier Airlines jetliner in Nebraska yesterday and forced it to fly to Atlanta in free from jail a prisoner who admitted to police in Alabama that he had a homosexual relationship with the hijacker.

The Boeing 737 jetliner, hijacked at Grand Island, Nebraska, with 11 passengers and four crew members on board, landed at Atlanta's Hartsfield airport at 12:02 p.m. EDT (8:02 p.m. Israel time). It had first stopped at Kansas City to release 20 women and children on board.

The hijacker was identified by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as Thomas Michael Hannan, 29, of Grand Island. They said the prisoner came to free was George David Stewart, 29, a native of Mobile, Alabama. The two were arrested in Alabama in September after allegedly holding up an Atlanta bank.

Generals take over again in Thailand

BANGKOK (UPI). — Thailand's senior generals, angered at delays in restoring democracy, overthrew their own appointed ministers yesterday in a bloodless coup and promised elections next year.

Official Radio Thailand said the coup leader, former Defense Minister Admiral Sangad Chalorvoo, told King Bhumibol he was forced to seize power "to remedy a deteriorating situation."

Political sources said Prime Minister Tanin Kraivichien had refused a "request" by the military command to fire half of his 15-man cabinet, and the generals then launched their coup yesterday evening.

Tanin, in office just two days under a year, had been appointed premier by Sangad last October 22. Sangad, who ended Thailand's experiment with democracy through a coup last year, criticized his appointee's 15-year plan to hold elections in 1992 as "far too long" and not meeting the wishes of the people.

In the meantime, Sangad has banned political gatherings.

casting Authority.

The half-hour meeting ended with a toast. This caused some resentment among Council members, complaining the leadership did not wait for their approval. But Yadin brushed off this criticism, telling the Council: "Anyway, the brandy was no good."

The heated Council debate at Beit Sokolow here proceeded at a fast pace as members were limited to five minutes each.

Yadin, who earlier had opposed joining the coalition, said he had changed his mind because of the "approaching emergency." He reported that his meetings in the U.S. in the past fortnight had convinced him that President Jimmy Carter and the Administration "are all involved in one issue only: ours. It's frightening," he said.

Tamir added that the recent Soviet-American declaration suddenly brought both superpowers to a common basis which is dangerous for Israel. "The timetable has changed and our reaction must be different," he declared passionately.

Yadin said that American Jewry is one of Israel's main assets, despite "incitement" from "high echelons" who claim that the Jews' loyalty to the U.S. is being tested. Yadin said he never saw Jews so united to help Israel. But he added, the Jews cannot understand why the Israelis cannot unite around the existing consensus.

"I hope I'll be proven wrong. We're now facing the toughest test we've faced since 1948. Therefore we must help the government...change the economy, solve social problems...else we won't survive," Yadin was alluding to the similarity in the Likud and DMC social and economic platforms.

MK Mordechai Eligably, a leader of North African students, argued he had not noticed any social or economic government plan, "and the question is whether to let the situation deteriorate or to help the Prime Minister succeed."

The DMC leaders were also heartened by the flexibility Begin showed in the talks with the U.S. over the Geneva conference.

"We must acknowledge this flexibility," Yadin told the Council. He recalled saying to U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and National Security Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski that "if someone would have told me eight months ago that the Likud government would approve this Vance-Dayton working paper I would have said he's seeing castles in the air."

Some leaders' desire to support the government was partly motivated by the realization there is no viable alternative to the present government since the main opposition party — Labour — is in "a shambles."

Yadin, Eligably and Amit added that an opposition party can do very little to achieve its goals.

"Will we fare better by performing (inside) or by being outside? Outside there will be sterile activity," Amit argued.

The DMC is getting the equivalent of seven portfolios in the previous government, Yadin added.

Yadin also argued the voter wanted the DMC to do "everything" to be in the government. But his opponents accused him of forsaking DMC goals for a few seats at the cabinet table.

"We're talking about joining the cabinet contrary to our promises to Shaking hands despite their differences about entering the government: DMC leaders Yigael Yadin (seated) and Amnon Rubinstein. (Lester J. Millman) the electorate." MK Amnon Rubinstein complained, "Who will believe that there is an emergency? Two weeks ago (before Yadin went to the U.S.) there was no emergency. The public will say we don't read newspapers," he argued.

"If there really is an emergency, why let's help the government. Let us declare we support it. But we don't have to be part of the governing system and share responsibility."

DMC COALITION TERMS

The following are the terms offered by the Likud a month ago and under which the DMC has now agreed to join the coalition:

• The DMC will retain freedom of expression and freedom to abstain in the Knesset on political matters relating to Judea and Samaria. (The DMC is ready for territorial concessions there, unlike the Likud.)

• The Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee will have the final say on settlement. If a DMC cabinet member demands a debate there.

• In addition to being deputy and acting prime minister, Prof. Yadin will coordinate the ministries dealing with social betterment and will control budgetary allocations.

• The Social Betterment Ministry will include the present Ministries of Labour and Social Welfare and the National Insurance Institute. The Health Ministry will be incorporated after the National Health Insurance bill is enacted, or — if that bill does not pass — no later than in a year from now.

• A committee of the four coalition partners (Likud, DMC, National Religious Party and Agudat Yisrael) will take up electoral reform and will decide on the number of regions into which the country will be divided. The DMC will have freedom of vote on the proposed bill.

• The DMC will have freedom of vote on all religious matters, including those pertaining to the status quo or religious affairs.

A plan by Mapam Ya'acov Hazan leader to broaden the Labour Alignment appears in today's "Al Hamishmar."

Hazan's basic premise is that the choice today is not between the various political forces within the labour movement, but between it as an entity and the parties of the right.

The "front" proposed by Hazan would be open to any Zionist-socialist grouping that regards Zionism as the national liberation movement of the Jewish people, and socialism as the way leading to the regeneration of Israel society.

The proposal, advanced by Hazan in his own name only, is expected to evoke debate both within Mapam and in the labour movement as a whole.

Does your mail come by snail?

By AARON SITTNER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Israel has no postal museum, but if it had, a prime candidate for display there would be a letter recently received in Jerusalem. The envelope is currently resting in a cardboard file, in a closet on the second floor of the General Post Office building in the capital. The letter was mailed to the Jerusalem addressee from Kibbutz Ma'ayan Zvi 35 years ago.

"I can assure you this is an exceptional case," quipped Shlomo Anbar, director of the Communications Ministry's Postal Service, when The Jerusalem Post asked him recently about some unusually long delays in delivery of mail from overseas.

Anbar, a former brigadier general, openly admits to the delays. He says: "There have been delays in recent weeks, especially in delivery of mail from overseas. But it's not our fault. Actually, the chief cause was that Rosh Hashana, Yom Kippur and the Sukkot festival all fell on weekdays."

Anbar pointed out that every festival has a "holiday eve" preceding it. "These, as you know, are half-workdays, and we have had quite a few of them this year. And the coincidence of the Rosh Hashana/Yom Kippur observances with the Moslem Ramadan/Id el-Fitr rites didn't help matters either, as hundreds of Arab postal workers took off."

"Meanwhile, jets kept on landing at Ben-Gurion Airport, unloading thousands of sacks of mail. Overseas postal authorities, of course, cannot be expected to anticipate our peculiar religious and manpower problems. So there was a pile-up. By the time a hatch had been sorted and sent to a regional distribution centre — well, it was a weekend again."

So everything ceases to move. Here and there a sorter or letter-carrier has taken a prolonged holiday vacation. Substitutes are not always available. Even when they are, chances are they are not sufficiently familiar with the layout of a population centre, or with the locations of addressees who neglect to mark their names on the mailbox. Only the regular letter-carrier knows how to find these people. More delays.

Yehuda Landau, in charge of overseas mail, opened a file. In it was a report monitoring postmarks in a sack of letters that arrived yesterday morning by air from the U.S. "Today is October 18," said Landau. "Yet, in the sack we found letters postmarked not only October 12, 13 or 14. We also saw quite a few postmarked October 8."

This proves — said the two men — that local delays of foreign mails can sometimes, even frequently, be blamed on delays at the other end.

Another factor determining delivery time is the frequency of dispatch from the sending country. Thus, while mail from the U.S. arrives daily, postal matter from Britain arrives only three times a week — something not many people know. This is despite daily flights from London to Tel Aviv.

But vagaries of air shipment schedules and problems of transshipments in foreign airports are only part of the story. More problems — and some sparking plans for solving them — will be discussed in a future article. (First in a series on Israel's postal service.)

Strike looms over firing of textile workers

By ZVI ARENSTEIN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

DIMONA. — The works committee of the Kitan textile plant here threatened drastic measures — including the possibility of striking the plant — if no progress is made by this morning in the dispute over the firing of 223 workers.

Representatives of management and the workers, accompanied by local labour council officials, continued negotiations late last night at Histadrut headquarters in Tel Aviv in an attempt to reach a compromise.

The dispute erupted last Sunday when management presented notices of dismissal to the 223 workers — some of them veterans with 15 years experience and a few months short of retirement benefits. The reason given was efficiency aimed at countering losses.

Kitan Dimona lost some IL12m. in 1976 and this year the firm's administration expects an even higher loss. A cutdown of the plant's 1,500 workers was inevitable. Management, aware that discussion with who was to be fired would only prolong the inevitable, drew up the list of those to be dismissed and submitted it to the works committee.

Amos Gabasi, head of the workers' committee, told The Jerusalem Post that "management was wrong to make decisions on who to fire without first consulting us."

The committee, after consulting the local labour council, countered with its own list — reportedly replacing the Dimona employees with employees from Hebron who are based in to the plant every day. But this list was not accepted.

According to Moshe Steingart, Kitan general manager, "If we were to go by their (works committee) list, the plant would close down for sure." He said firing the Arabs, who job mostly on the production line, would lower production, making losses even higher and probably forcing the firm to close down completely.

Steingart indicated that the plant would lower production, making losses even higher and probably forcing the firm to close down completely.

The plant, meanwhile, has continued to operate at almost a normal pace through the weeklong controversy, despite a high degree of tension among those who received notices of dismissal.

Benson loses round in bid to fire IBB receiver

TEL AVIV (Ihm). — The District Court here yesterday deferred discussion on convicted embezzler Yehoshua Benson's request for the dismissal of the receiver appointed by his defunct Israeli-British Bank.

Judge Shlomo Lowenberg said that as Benson — released from prison in September at the Prime Minister's recommendation on grounds of ill-health — was still a bankrupt, he could not take part in the legal deliberations.

The judge said he would invite the trustees in bankruptcy and a representative of the receiver to give him their opinion on the request before holding a hearing on the latter.

Benson made the application under the time (February 1976) that he was sentenced to a 12-year jail term for embezzling $47m. from IBB. Hearings on it were deferred at the time pending the outcome of bankruptcy proceedings begun against Benson after he failed to pay the IL25m. fine levied against him when he lost his appeal on the prison sentence.

In his decision yesterday, Judge Lowenberg said that Benson's release from prison did not cancel the fine against him. "It should be clear to everyone that Benson remains convicted of his criminal activities and that nothing has been changed by his release," the judge said.

In requesting the dismissal of Yosef Milo as receiver for IBB, Benson had claimed that appointment gave preference to the Bank of Israel among IBB's creditors. In addition to requesting Milo's dismissal, Benson had also asked for cancellation of recognition of a IL47m. IBB debt to the Bank of Israel and of a IL464m. debt to IBB of London.

In order to gain legal standing for his application, Benson had had to present proof of his status as IBB creditor. He did so — to the amount of only IL45,000. Judge Lowenberg poured scorn on this yesterday, and on the manner in which the proof was presented, noting that only a full year after Benson's first application had he offered proper evidence of his status as creditor.

J'lem warily awaits Arab reactions

By DAVID LANDAU
Jerusalem Post Diplomatic Correspondent

Jerusalem is carefully avoiding comment or speculation on the likely Arab reactions to the Vance-Dayan working paper, preferring to withhold judgement until officially informed by Washington of an authoritative Arab reply.

The reticence is partly due to the still unclear situation in the Arab capitals. Expert observers here have noted an apparent divergence between Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Syria's Hafez Assad.

The Egyptian leader is apparently determined not to reject the working paper, but rather to propose amendments to enable him to accept it. Damascus has taken a more openly negative stand.

But Israel's wait-and-see approach is guided, too, by its belief that in concluding a working paper with the U.S., it has captured the initiative in the diplomatic battle and put the Arab side on the defensive. This belief is especially held by Foreign Minister Dayan himself, who negotiated the paper with President Jimmy Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

"Just imagine our situation," a source close to Dayan remarked. "If the U.S. had drawn up a working paper with Egypt and we were in the position of having to reject it or submit amendments to it."

Dayan has not ruled out further negotiations on details of the paper. In fact, he has never expected the Arab side to accept the paper in toto, and is prepared to engage in more bargaining through the Americans.

But he and his aides are confident that Israel's basic conditions — no Palestinian Organization at Geneva, no negotiation over a Palestinian state, and no insistence on Israel's total withdrawal — are fully protected by the various "understandings and agreements" signed with the U.S. in 1973 and 1976, and reaffirmed in the U.S.-Israel joint statement of October 5, 1977.

While the U.S. does not necessarily endorse an approach of Israel's conditions to Israel's right to insist on them, Dayan believes. The policy of official reticence was reflected yesterday at a briefing for European ambassadors outside the Common Market given by Foreign Ministry Director-General Ephraim Evron. While Evron was exhaustive and illuminating on the steps and considerations leading to the working paper, he would have no prediction as to how the Arabs would receive it or what "amendments" they would seek to introduce.

The briefing, the second of a new series, was attended by the envoys of Austria, Switzerland, the Scandinavian states, Greece and Turkey. The forum was instituted after these envoys complained that their EEC colleagues were being kept better informed of diplomatic developments than they.

Civil flights halted for air force drill

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Air Force yesterday staged a two-hour exercise to test the country's air defences. Israeli air space was closed to all civilian flights, as military jets circled over towns, breaking the sound barrier.

The ban on civilian flights required the rescheduling of about 10 flights at Ben-Gurion Airport. No flights had to be cancelled, though departures and arrivals had to be either advanced or delayed.

The spokesman for the airport, Nitzan Tamari, told The Jerusalem Post that there were no problems, and all passengers got away on their flights. He reported that all but two of its morning flights managed to get away before the exercise started.

One El Al plane, Flight 547 to Zurich, had to return to the airport shortly after take-off because of suspected engine trouble. It just managed to land before the exercise got under way.

BEN-GURION AIRPORT. — El Al may face a shutdown in two weeks as a result of a vote yesterday by the maintenance men to strike if their demands are not met.

When the ballots were counted yesterday evening, it emerged that 85 per cent of the maintenance men favoured a strike and were prepared to risk the government implementing its threat to close the airline if there are more labour disputes.

The maintenance men charge that El Al has grown over the past few years, but the increase in staff has not paralleled this development. They also complain about their shift work and that because of the shortage of workers, they have to work virtually every Saturday.

Management claims that it adds new maintenance men from time to time and has taken on 31 new staffers in the past three months. It also argues that the shift system is the best possible. While the management of the airline is to cut their working days, the maintenance men want to reduce hours worked or that wage increase.

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — Some 3,000 passengers will have passed through Haifa port in the 48 hours ending tonight, arriving and leaving in five ships and staying for one or two days of sightseeing.

They are part of an estimated 20 per cent rise in sea-borne visitors this year, and a doubling in the number of cruise ships calling here during tours of Mediterranean ports. American and German heads the list of tourists, who come from nearly everywhere.

Port officials expect the new passenger terminal now under construction here to be completed next summer. Plans for it have gone through several changes since the early 1950s (when most tourists still arrived by sea) and even more delays because of indecision or recurrent shortage of funds.

A former magistrate, now a lawyer, was charged yesterday in the Jerusalem District Court with suborning a witness to perjury. Also charged with the same crime was building contractor Sasson Levy.

The lawyer is Moshe Mosek, once a magistrate and a traffic court judge in Jerusalem.

BUCHAREST (AP). — A draft resolution sponsored by several Arab governments on the administered territories led to a political controversy on Wednesday at the 23rd International Red Cross conference — and a compromise formula adopted later also reflected dissent.

Beduin movements to centre of country are 'serious invasion'

By SARAH HONIG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

VIV. — Three entire Beduin tribes the Sinai have moved beyond the line. Thousands of Beduin sheep and camels are currently grazing Israel proper. Hundreds of Beduin are now settling in the centre of the country, in the Tel Aviv area. Their flocks are familiar to drivers along the way.

Beduin movements towards the centre are different. "These are seasonal migrations of nomads in of grazing grounds, and the large of people and livestock involved is an invasion," Alon Galili, who he Green Patrols told The Jerusalem over vast stretches of land for which fierce battles once took place. The open country has become largely Arab.

Galili cited some of the dangers from the Beduin movement to the quality of life in urban centres — health and sanitation hazards and a rise in crime.

A case in point is Holon where several Beduin clans from the Negev are living. They constructed rudimentary shelters of wood, sheet metal and blankets on the sand dunes outside the Molelet quarter where they raise their sheep and goats. They do odd jobs in the city's industrial zone.

Deputy Mayor Dov Chomsky told The Post that the municipality "has no objection to anyone moving to Holon, but we demand that whoever makes his home in town adapt himself to at least the most minimal standards of life and respect the laws. We cannot have a situation in which laws apply to some people and not to others. The Beduin in Molelet have installed no sanitary facilities. They raise livestock near the homes of people, and just as no town allows baryard animals within the city limits, neither can we."

Molelet residents complain that they are bothered by the Beduin. "There are human and animal faeces all over the place and everywhere, even dead animals. Carcasses rot just where the animal dropped dead, and Nahum said that flies, dirt and stench are too much to bear."

Galili and Chomsky added that the Beduin herds "have eaten up gardens, parks and lawns all over the southern part of Holon." Their "settlement" serves as an unofficial hotel to workers from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank who illegally stay overnight despite the law making their return home each night mandatory, they said.

Galili also argues that the underworld finds the Beduin willing accomplices. Police confirmed that Beduin have been involved in many of the petrol station robberies which have plagued the area.

But Galili decided to do something about the situation. At one point the city secured promises of housing for its Beduin squatters in Ramle. At first the Beduin agreed to move, only to change their minds.

When efforts to convince them to move failed, the city and the Green Patrols rounded up and moved many of their animals to the Beersheba area, where they were followed by a number of families. Some 60 Beduin still remain in the vicinity of Molelet, and the city is afraid that, as in the past, others will replace those who left.

Chomsky pointed out that the Beduin are not homeless people. "The Beduin in Holon have land in the Shuvral area where they can build their homes and raise their animals," he said.

According to Galili, the centre of the country between Kiryat Gat and Hadera now has thousands of Beduin who have moved in quietly from the Gaza Strip, the West Bank and the northern Sinai. "There are some 80 encampments in this area or at least 800 Beduin families, which tend to be very large," he said.

Many local authorities for some reason shy away from action when it comes to the Beduin. Crops are ruined and parks are destroyed. But in some places like Rosb Ha'ayin, local functionaries provide Beduin with notes to the effect that they have their 'permission' to be there. A blind eye is deliberately turned to behaviour that would never be tolerated of a Jewish inhabitant of any town. If more local governments would complain and alert the police, this situation could be handled," Galili asserted.

Levy hopes DMC will keep Absorption Ministry alive

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The inclusion of the Democratic Movement for Change in the cabinet will reduce the likelihood that the Absorption Ministry will be shut down, according to Ministry sources.

The Jerusalem Post learned yesterday that Prime Minister Menachem Begin met with Absorption Minister David Levy in a half-hour private talk on Wednesday over the future of the ministry. Levy has requested several times over the last few weeks that the future of his Ministry be made clear. The Liberal faction of the Likud has advocated the abolition of the ministry.

Levy did most of the talking at the recent meeting, informing Begin of the need to keep absorption under government supervision and the "danger" of handing the immigrant over to the Jewish Agency, as demanded by its treasurer Arye Dulitz and recommended by the Horev Commission Report. The Prime Minister said he would weigh the matter, but did not reveal what body would decide and when.

With the addition of the DMC to the government, Levy feels more certain that his point of view will prevail, according to sources close to him. The DMC has generally supported Levy's contention that absorption should be in government hands; MK Assaf Yaguri, a DMC member of the Knesset ally and absorption committee, has been most vociferous on the issue. The DMC could counterbalance the Liberal Party's position.

Flomin hints at help for upper middle class

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Deputy Finance Minister Yehzekel Flomin said new economic reforms are due "shortly," but refused to reveal their nature in a speech to a rotary club members here yesterday.

"The main effort of this government is directed towards straightening out the hair-raising distortions caused by its predecessors," Flomin said. As part of this effort, he said, the price of water, electricity and other basic services will rise gradually until it approaches real costs, "even if the rise to a contributing factor to inflation."

By the end of the month, Flomin continued, the government will have prepared a list of "several dozen" state-owned economic enterprises which will go on sale. There will be a uniform criterion for these sales, "though not in all cases will the government prefer the highest bidder."

Calling the upper middle class "the salt and pepper of our democratic structure," Flomin said the government would do its best to help them. He himself, he added, would, if he could, abolish the inheritance tax.

"It is a political tax, intended to transfer private capital to government — and anyhow, it yields only 11.80m a year and isn't worth the trouble," he said.

Another reform envisaged by the government is to abolish the distinction between "rural" and "urban" areas for the sake of taxation," Flomin said. "But the special facilities for agriculture will continue," he promised.

Hammer wants wage tax make high school free

By LEA LEVAVI
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — High school education free starting next year if Education Minister Zevulun Hammer succeeds in putting an "education insurance" the plan, which was announced by the minister at a meeting with journalists here yesterday, would be to pay 1/4 of 1 per cent of his earnings into an education insurance fund. The fund would be 11.50m, which parents in high school tuition.

Hammer said a committee has been set up to study the plan and within three months.

of the almost two hours Hammer spent with the journalists was devoted to the controversial subject of Jewish Consciousness secular schools.

"Jewish Consciousness isn't being thought up," Hammer said before he began to do his thing. "The difference is that it is essential and will do something about it."

When he was asked about the subject, he said that the subject had been finalized. He said that he does not want to force anyone to carry out religious commandments in his everyday life but that he does want more than just dry book-learning.

He said that his ideas might first be implemented in a few schools where parents and teachers want more Jewish studies. Discussion periods and after-school activities might be another starting point. The emphasis in history classes might be changed slightly to include more Jewish history, and in those schools where "Bible is now taught as literature, history, geography, the religious angle would be added."

In answer to sharp questions, the minister said he regrets a statement he once made implying that lack of Jewish education leads to drugs and crime.

"I don't believe that's true," he said. "There's also a difference between fighting a political battle to introduce an idea and being the minister of education who sees how the system works and has to implement ideas."

Pressed to say whether the Jewish Consciousness programme would be at the expense of other subjects, he said that it might eventually be decided to add an extra hour to the school day, but that that was only a possibility.

Tests show NY diamond jeweller shot, burned

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP). — The body identified as that of New York diamond dealer Abraham Shafizadeh had in fact been shot and burned, as originally believed, police now say.

Dr. Rafael Criado, pathologist at the state morgue, explained on Wednesday that three bullet particles were discovered in the body found charred and burned about 80 kms. outside San Juan just one day after Shafizadeh's arrival here.

Criado told a news conference he originally disregarded the seemingly unburned corpse exhumed on Friday because it was not charred as he had expected. He said he later realized that the body, buried on August 4, had decomposed to such a degree that it did not show any burn marks.

He added that he discovered the bullet particles in the final X-rays. He said he was now convinced that the burned body on which he had performed an autopsy in August and which was exhumed on Friday were "one and the same person."

Authorities had exhumed four bodies last weekend in the search for the charred remains of Shafizadeh. Criado checked Shafizadeh's dental charts against the first body exhumed and found they matched. After additional tests, he announced on Tuesday that it was in fact that of Shafizadeh.

Col. Hector M. Lugo, director of the Bureau of Criminal Investigations, said he is expanding the investigation to New York "now that Shafizadeh's body has been positively identified."

The dead jeweler's brother, Dr. Farokh Shafizadeh-Hakimi of Chicago, said that Shafizadeh left New York on July 28 with more than $200,000 in gems and was supposed to see San Juan jeweller Hector Acevedo during his trip. However, Acevedo has denied he saw him.

Two other mainland diamond brokers were killed here just months apart in 1974. All three were shot with 38-calibre pistols, but police said a ballistics test showed different guns were used in each slaying.

Shafizadeh's body was turned over to his brother, who was expected to take it back to New York. Originally he was expected to take the body to Israel for burial.

Ministry orders clinic reopened

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Health Ministry has demanded that Shazara Zedek Hospital in Jerusalem reopen its urological outpatient clinic.

The facility was closed on October 7. This followed reports of a dispute between Shazara Zedek's director, David Maier, and Alexander Heyat, head of the urology department.

Some doctors at the hospital say Prof. Maier would like to see Dr. Heyat leave the staff. With the latter refusing to do so, they say, the administration responded by ordering his clinic shut.

In a telegram to Maier, the Jerusalem District Health Officer, Eliezer Kessel asked for the clinic to be reopened forthwith.

Both Maier and the hospital's spokesman were unavailable for comment.

Mesheh to press Ehrlich for C-o-L allowance payment every 3 months

By SHLOMO MAOZ
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The accelerated rate of inflation and its implications for the cost-of-living allowance will apparently be the main topic to be discussed today at a meeting between Finance Minister Simcha Ehrlich and Health Minister Secretary-General Yehoram Mesheh.

The Histadrut has demanded that prices increase by more than 5 per cent in a three-month period, the C-o-L allowance should be increased, instead of waiting six months as at present.

Mesheh is also expected to raise the Histadrut demand that the Government subsidize Kupat Holim at some fixed proportion of the sick-fund's budget. Ehrlich opposes this, on the grounds that a national health insurance law is in the offing.

As for short-term policies, Ehrlich will discuss with Mesheh the minister's plan to introduce a "creeping reduction" of subsidies on prices of basic foodstuffs and public transport fares.

Soon after the Histadrut convention, which opens on November 7, negotiations on new wage agreements are expected to begin between the Histadrut and the employers' organizations.

Marc Chagall is due here next week to receive the Jerusalem Municipality award he declined to accept at his home in France in honour of his 90th birthday last July.

The world-acclaimed artist, who was in Jerusalem in 1962, when his stained-glass windows symbolizing the Twelve Tribes were installed at the Hadassah Medical Centre. Three years later, Chagall supervised the laying of his mosaic designs in the Knesset's main hall, and in 1969, he attended a ceremony unveiling the famous Chagall tapestries on one wall.

Shortly before Chagall's last birthday, the municipality decided to send him its "Distinguished Citizen" award in recognition of his contributions to the culture of Jerusalem. Joe Buxbaum, a philanthropist and friend of both Chagall and Mayor Teddy Kolek, agreed to go to southern France to give the artist the award. But Chagall declined to accept it, adding that he would come to Jerusalem for the award ceremony instead. The event will be held in the presence of President Ephraim Katzir at Beit Hanassi.

Chagall also has an appointment with the mayor to visit the Western Wall and to attend a dinner in his honour at the Israel Museum.

While in Israel, the artist will also be granted honorary doctorates from the Hebrew University and the Weizmann Institute.

Full programming resumed on Israel Radio's three stations at midnight on Wednesday when the Broadcasting Authority's board of directors agreed to terms suggested earlier by Education and Culture Minister Zevulun Hammer.

The four-day shutdown, except for news bulletins on the hour, resulted from a dispute between radio journalists and management over implementation of a new radio schedule. The employees agreed to strike the new programmes, which entail longer hours and staff changes, for the next two weeks, during which the two sides will negotiate further.

It was the third shutdown of radio broadcasts in seven months. Most Israel Radio fans listened during the four days to a steady current of Army Programme offerings.

Book details Rabin's Six Day War 'anxieties'

Jerusalem Post Staff

A biography of former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin published yesterday details Rabin's anxieties about the Six Day War — a time, says, when he became "the lion-maker, a position not held by the Premier."

The book covers the reputed "collapse" of Rabin in the week before the war. While minimizing the reports of "nervous poisoning," Slater indicates that Rabin had suffered from exhaustion resulting from 15 and 20-hour work days. According to Lea Rabin, an army doctor who treated her husband, and after a 24-hour rest, he awoke feeling "one hundred per cent better."

Rabin's agony was not alleviated even when he sought out the advice of David Ben-Gurion, whom Rabin always deferred to as "my teacher."

Slater reports that Rabin visited Ben-Gurion on May 21, and the meeting "shattered Rabin's morale." As soon as he opened the door, Rabin said, Ben-Gurion launched into an attack: "What's going on?" Ben-Gurion demanded, "What's the matter with you? In 1968 I didn't begin the war until I was sure the sides over Tel Aviv and our other cities were protected by the French air force — and here you are, entering into a war in just any old way."

Slater's book, published by Robson, relates the life story of the Premier up to and including his resignation earlier this year.

Biggest German manhunt since World War II Bonn hunts 16 Schleyer killers

BONN. — West German police yesterday launched what they called their most extensive hunt since World War II for 16 persons — 10 of them women — sought in the kidnapping of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

"They shall not rest," government spokesman Klaus Boelling said of the terrorists. "Every citizen in our country will help security officials track them down."

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt called on world governments, as well as the German people, to close ranks in the fight against extremist guerrillas. Schmidt yesterday addressed parliament for 40 minutes on the crisis which began with Schleyer's kidnapping in Cologne on September 5 and later involved the hijacking of the Lufthansa Boeing 747 airliner.

Preliminary examinations of the body of Schleyer, found in the trunk of a car parked in Mulhouse, France, on Wednesday night, showed that he was shot in the back of the head, according to French officials. They added that other head injuries appeared to have been caused by heavy blows.

Schleyer was killed apparently after three leaders of the Baader-Meinhof urban guerrilla gang committed suicide in German jails under mysterious circumstances following the rescuing of the 35 hostages from the hijacked plane in Somalia in a German commando raid.

But violence erupted against German-owned stores and vehicles across Europe during the three days in apparent protest against the jailhouse deaths of the three terrorists. Explosions ripped through German auto showrooms in the Paris suburb of Pont-Marly and the southern French city of Toulouse, heavily damaging new cars but causing no reported injuries. A Paris laboratory owned by a German chemical firm was bombed. Other German-related incidents were reported in Holland, Italy, Austria, Britain and Greece.

"One hundred thousand explosive attacks will destroy the structures of West German economic capitalism in Europe," said an anonymous German-accented caller to the Marseilles office of a French news agency.

The Federal Criminal Office in Bonn said it believed that Schleyer's killers were part of the same terrorist cell responsible for the slaying of banker Juergen Ponto and Chief Federal Prosecutor Siegfried Buhack. At airports, railway stations and shopping areas throughout West Germany, police were distributing 100,000 handbills with the pictures of the 16 suspects. Radio and television reports advised Germans of special telephone numbers where they could report tips. Police also began spot checks of motorists on major highways in West Germany and West Berlin, and border guards increased their surveillance at crossing points.

Criminal Office spokesmen said police had raided eight suspected terrorist hideouts and seized 13 vehicles used in the attacks.

Chancellor Schmidt, looking strained from loss of sleep, told legislators that the event which began with Schleyer's kidnapping had filled West Germans "with pain, suffering, hope, happiness and disappointment." Schmidt said that the help West Germany had received from other governments — notably Somalia — "shows how much the awareness has grown that everyone must be prepared to work together to provide effective protection against the taking of hostages."

He said that West Germany, which presented the draft of an anti-hostage resolution at the UN a year ago, would press all member states to pass this treaty as soon as possible. (AP, UPI)

Ex-SS man Schleyer foresaw end

BONN (AP). — Hanns-Martin Schleyer, the 62-year-old industrialist murdered by terrorist kidnappers, got his early training as a Nazi economic administrator in Czechoslovakia and after the war became one of West Germany's most influential businessmen.

As president of the Federal Association of Employers since 1973, he directed the negotiation of wage contracts with the unions each year. As president of the Federal Industry Association, he was industry's leading spokesman.

In frequent appearances on television and other platforms, he staunchly defended the principles of leistung — relentless hard work — and free enterprise which helped to make West Germany an economic giant again after World War II.

In July, at the funeral of his friend Juergen Ponto, a leading banker who was shot to death by terrorists at his home near Frankfurt, Schleyer reportedly told friends: "The next victim is standing in this room."

Schleyer's body was found by French police on Wednesday in the trunk of a car in Mulhouse, 44 days after he was kidnapped in a bloody ambush in Cologne.

Born in Offenbach, Schleyer, like his father, became a lawyer. As a law student at Heidelberg and Innsbruck University, he joined the Nazi Party and the SS and in 1943 was sent to Prague. There he supervised Czechoslovakia's economic contribution to Hitler's war machine.

He joined the Daimler-Benz organization, West Germany's most prestigious automobile company, in 1951 and rose to the board of directors after only eight years.

He earned the enmity of organized labor in 1966 when he ordered a lockout of striking metal workers in Baden-Wuerttemberg state. And having built the Federal Employers Association into one of the most powerful lobbies in Bonn, he was no friend of the unions backing Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's labour-oriented Social Democrats.

'America may have to guard its M.E. oil'

WASHINGTON (AP). — U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said on Wednesday that the U.S. might some day have to protect its Middle East oil supply.

The nation "must reckon with the necessity of maintaining the physical security of our sources of (oil) supply in the Middle East," Schlesinger said in a speech to a military association.

He termed this a military responsibility which could be "potentially demanding," but he did not elaborate.

He said by the mid-1980s, world oil production would not meet potential demand. Unless the U.S. had begun shifting to other fuels by then, it would face an energy shortage, high unemployment, inflation and recession, he commented.

Schlesinger said such a situation "could shake the political and social foundations of the U.S. in a way that they have not been shaken since the 1930s" — a reference to the Great Depression.

The U.S. first experienced an energy shortage during the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74, when it depended on foreign nations for about 56 per cent of its oil. Now the percentage is 48 per cent, and the impact of another cut-off would be more severe than before, Schlesinger said.

He said the U.S. must adjust its economy away from heavy dependence on oil during the next eight years.

May cancel foreign trip Carter wants oil law fast

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — President Carter, in a calculated political gamble, said yesterday that he would cancel an important nine-month tour next month if Congress did not back his drive to cut America's energy consumption.

The President told reporters he would call off the tour if the two houses of Congress did not agree on acceptable energy legislation before his planned departure on November 22.

Political analysts viewed the move as placing pressure on Congress either to act or take any blame for hindering his foreign policy objectives and creating a serious domestic crisis over energy.

The immediate reaction from Congress was that Carter had better not pack his bags yet for the trip — his second abroad since coming to office last January — since it could still be wrestling with energy issues into December.

The House of Representatives has already approved Carter's energy programme more or less as he submitted it last April, including taxes on crude oil, petrol-guzzling large cars, and the use of oil in industry.

But the full Senate has not yet acted on these energy measures. Instead, its finance committee has disapproved the President's tax proposals.

U.S. reviewing S. Africa ties

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — The U.S. says it is reassessing its relations with South Africa after Wednesday's crackdown on critics of the white government there.

A strongly-worded State Department statement reflected a feeling here that relations between the Carter Administration and the government of Prime Minister John Vorster were in danger of deteriorating seriously.

Vice-President Walter Mondale, in an interview with the "Rand Daily Mail," said a few days ago it would be increasingly difficult for Washington to continue to have good relations with Pretoria unless there were changes in South Africa.

As part of these changes, he said, it was crucial for the Vorster government to begin a dialogue with non-white political leaders in South Africa.

But the government cracked down sharply Wednesday on black leaders and their white sympathizers, banning 18 organizations and the two main black newspapers and arresting at least 50 people.

State Department spokesman Rodding Carter said the crackdown was "designed to stifle the freedom of expression by spokesmen for black aspirations in South Africa."

A group of Congressmen, led by Democrat Andrew Maguire, said they were considering legislation which would suspend loan guarantees to U.S. firms investing in South Africa.

Egypt-Libya tensions ease

CAIRO (AP). — President Anwar Sadat met with a representative of Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi on Wednesday in what appeared to be another sign of the easing of tensions between the two countries involved in a border clash three months ago.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency said the commander of the Libyan Special Forces, Major Abdul Fatah Younis, came to Cairo to inform Sadat that Gaddafi had agreed to hand over the Egyptian consulate office in Benghazi to Egyptian diplomats after repairs.

Sadat in turn agreed to hand over the Libyan consulate in the coastal city of Alexandria to Libyan diplomats, the agency added.

The two countries' consulate were damaged by demonstrators at the time of the border incident.

Pilots' chief to UN as air-strike looms

HONG KONG (Reuter). — The president of the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations, which has called a worldwide 48-hour strike of pilots next week as a protest against hijacking, left here yesterday for talks in New York with UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Captain Derry Pearce, president of the association which groups 55,000 pilots in 63 countries, has said the stoppage could be averted if the UN General Assembly agreed promptly to discuss hijacking.

A spokesman for Captain Pearce said that he expects to see Waldheim on Friday.

The strike is due to start on Tuesday at 1200 GMT. (Leader — Page 14)

BLAST. — Three tons of nitroglycerine exploded at a dynamite factory in Johannesburg yesterday, and first reports said three men were killed and about 30 injured. The cause of the blast, which completely destroyed a processing building at the Modderfontein plant, was not immediately known.

Pretoria warns of further crackdowns

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter). — The South African government may take further drastic measures to clamp down on people and organizations it holds responsible for fermenting racial discord, according to sources close to the government.

"Africans believe in strong action, and the government must show it can deal with unrest," Information Minister Connie Mulder told foreign correspondents on Wednesday.

He was speaking just after the government had outlawed 18 organizations and banned the country's two main black newspapers. Between 50 and 70 persons were arrested in dawn swoops on homes and offices, and an undisclosed number of others were served with banning orders.

Police and Justice Minister James Kruger said on television Wednesday night that the actions were necessary because "a relatively small group of activists" had maintained the unrest which began in the middle of last year.

Despite new murmurings of black unrest, most of South Africa was quiet yesterday. Black students in Vereeniging's Sharpeville township, 58 kms. south of Johannesburg, were reported to have stoned three schools, a number of cars and a delivery truck. There were also reports of continuing unrest in Garankuwa township, outside Pretoria.

The South African press, with the exception of one or two government newspapers, edited yesterday that the closing of South Africa's free press, considered the least restrictive Africa.

In a front-page editorial he wrote "Into an Age of Darkness," the "Rand Daily Mail" said the crackdown was "the most authoritarian action this government has ever taken."

"In one fell swoop he (Kruger) eliminated every vestige of the opposition outside the approved 'homeland' system."

"And now there is to be an election in which the ruling Nationalists to decide the white opposition after which they will limit their new constitution while diminishing the role of what is the opposition anyway, and their executive president w authoritarian powers."

"Then the dictatorship is complete," the paper wrote. Thursday is the deadline nominations for the November general election for 165 seats all-white Parliament and members of the four Provincial Councils.

White voters are being asked to vote for separate parties for the country's 43m. white, coloureds (mixed-race) and Asians, but excluding the Bantu of 18 million. (Leader —

Manila bombs rebels

MANILA. — Philippine navy ships and fighter planes bombed and strafed Moslem rebel strongholds on the Zamboanga Peninsula as 500 rebels continued yesterday to attack military outposts and civilian communities, the local military authorities reported.

In Manila, a Defence Department statement said Defence Secretary Juan Ponce Enrile blamed Nur Misuari, the Libyan-based chief of the Moro National Liberation Front, for the fighting in the southern Philippines.

Enrile's statement followed reports from Zamboanga, where Misuari told a news conference that a Philippine army general and 84 of his men had to be killed in Jolo, 960 km. south of Manila, last week and that will happen to those who opt liberation front.

The latest upsurge in the 10-month ceasefire seemed to have finally ended last December in an effort to the five-year Moslem rebellion.

The southern command yesterday's attacks were against at least 500 Moslem positioned near Zamboanga, a nerve centre of government operations against the rebel city has been surrounded by to prevent attacks.

The number of government involved in the latest action disclosed. (AP, UPI)

Soviets cut Somali arms

NAIROBI (UPI). — Russia on Wednesday for the first time publicly said it had stopped supplying weapons to Somalia as heavy fighting raged between Somali-backed guerrillas and Soviet-supported Ethiopian troops in the Ogaden desert.

As the bitter conflict continued, an official Ethiopian Government announcement said Ethiopia was on the point of "anarchy" with widespread sabotage and subversion. It urged Ethiopia's 22 million population to "intensify their vigilance to discipline to crush the enemy within."

At a news conference on official Ethiopia radio and news agency, Rastanov, said "officially" the USSR has stopped supplies to Somalia "though" now providing Ethiopia with live weapons to protect revolution.

Diplomatic sources said the statement, which came the day after the withdrawal of 1,000 Soviet advisers from Somalia as relations between the two countries continued to deteriorate.

Bellow behind on alimony, faces jail

CHICAGO (AP). — Saul Bellow, who won a $160,000 Nobel Prize for literature, has been sentenced to 10 days in jail for failing to make alimony payments to his third wife.

Bellow, 61, was granted five days to file an appeal bond. Judge Mary Ann McMorrow handed down the sentence on Tuesday after an attorney for Bellow's former wife, Susan Glassman Bellow, told her that Bellow has not made any of the $2,500 per-month alimony payments that were set by a court last April. The judge might drop the sentence if Bellow agrees to pay the $11,150 he owes her wife.

Their divorce was granted at the request of Mrs. Bellow, cited desertion and mental cruelty grounds. She was in custody of their child, Daniel Bellow was ordered to pay month in alimony, plus $650 in child support.

Terror and Dr. Waldheim

WHETHER THE 48-hour world wide strike of airline pilots scheduled for next week is the most effective way of jolting the UN General Assembly into taking action, at long last, against the hijacking of civilian aircraft and the taking of crews and passengers as hostages, may perhaps be doubted.

What is certain is that the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations had ample cause for this protest action. It follows not only the brutal murder of Lufthansa captain Juergen Schumann by a quartet of terrorist hijackers earlier this week, but years of cruel indifference by the United Nations to the persistent threat of air piracy.

It is all the more puzzling, therefore, that UN Secretary General Waldheim should be taking such pains to dissuade the pilots from going ahead with their projected strike. Ought he not to have encouraged them instead?

Extensive research would not be needed to establish that Dr. Waldheim is categorically opposed to hijacking and terrorism. He thinks they are a clear and present danger to the safety of world air communications and to close contacts among nations, and they constitute a denial of human rights as well...but.

But deplorable as such practices may be, they cannot be torn out of their political contexts. To eliminate terrorism, he feels, the roots that feed it must first be eradicated.

That is a rather familiar notion, probably shared by the vast majority of UN member states — those that for the moment are not affected by terrorism, those that hope to escape injury by ignoring it, and those that actively promote it. Because of this, all attempts to get the world organization to concert measures against terrorism have so far come to naught.

Dr. Waldheim is surely familiar with the record. After the assassination of the 11 Israeli athletes in Munich in 1972, the General Assembly agreed to set up a 36-nation committee to recommend ways and means of handling international terrorism. This committee's achievements to date, in a matter once sanctimoniously described by the assembly as of "importance to mankind," are precisely zero.

Last year, following Israel's successful rescue action at Entebbe, the assembly passed a 38-nation resolution calling for the drafting of a convention to forbid the taking of hostages. But in return for Libya's consent to drop an amendment limiting application to "innocent hostages," the resolution's chief sponsor, West Germany, was forced to delete all references to the punishment and extradition of kidnappers.

The actual drafting of the convention was to have started at the present session, and expectations have not been running very high. The Mogadishu affair could perhaps shock the General Assembly into deeds — with the dramatic aid of such interest groups as the airline pilots.

The UN's Secretary General, however, apparently finds such pressure tactics distasteful. They tend to play havoc with the orderly process of the organization's mass diplomacy, which currently has different preoccupations and a different timetable.

Plainly Dr. Waldheim is only serving in this as mouthpiece for the majority of delegates; and no secretary general can afford to completely overlook the score-board. But the previous bolders of that high office, all of them, did not flinch at one time or another from expressing themselves on issues of high moral principle in disregard of the numbers and strength of the opposition — and of their own chances of re-election for a further term.

There is every indication that Dr. Waldheim will not emulate their example in the matter of international terrorism.

Vorster turns back

THE NEWS from Johannesburg is most distressing to all those who have been hoping to see South Africa progressively shed the ancient burden of racial discrimination, and reach out into a new pattern of liberal accommodation between the white minority and the black majority.

Mr. Vorster's government may well win the overwhelming mandate it is seeking from the white electorate in the forthcoming, hastily-arranged national poll. Indeed it is possible that the crackdown on black newspapers and organizations is meant to demonstrate to voters that the present Nationalist administration is determined, no less than the Afrikaner diehards, to resist what is portrayed as foreign meddling.

The result, however, will be not only to invite increased, and perhaps intolerable, tension at home, but also to court the intensification of pressure from abroad.

Israel's stake in South Africa's peaceful march towards racial harmony is all too apparent. It arises not only from the presence there of a large and important Jewish community, but also from a common need to often confront similar external threats.

Not that Israel's ties with South Africa have necessarily been more extensive than those maintained by many, if not most, other countries: they have only been more assiduously publicized, by Israel's foes and their friends, in an effort to bracket Zionism with apartheid as twin instances of racism.

In fact, apartheid has been the main obstacle to better relations between the two countries. The condemnation of that policy by this country's representatives at international forums was not just lip service to Israel's one-time black African connection: rather it expressed the native, and deep-seated abhorrence of racism on the part of the Jewish State.

It was, however, Israel's expectation that, by not treating her merely as an outcast, South Africa might yet be helped to gradually choose the path of accommodation with rising black Africa, both across the border and within her own frontiers.

That prospect brightened when the lesson of the 1960 Sharpeville massacre began to seep in, and especially when the last bastions of European colonialism, which had shielded South Africa from contact with the rest of the continent, finally crumbled. The consequences were unmistakable. The more offensive marks of racial separatism were slowly but steadily discarded, and Mr. Vorster showed his statesmanship in helping to bring his obnoxious neighbour, Mr. Smith of Rhodesia, to his senses.

Wednesday's crackdown on the blacks — carried out on the pretence of disciplining "a small group of anarchists" — may set South Africa back irreversibly. It certainly will not prevent the recurrence of Soweto-type riots; it will only assure their spread like wildfire across the country.

Nor will it silence young blacks, like the dead Steve Biko, obviously killed by his white jailers; it will only make certain that the next generation of black leaders will, unlike Biko, be fully dedicated to the destruction of white South Africa.

By showing that he is still seeking the course of "white supremacy forever," Mr. Vorster has placed a most severe strain on relations between his country and those that are still its well-wishers, Israel among them.

Himself one of the founding-fathers of Gush Emunim, YEHUDA BEN-MEIR, MK, is unhappy about the manner of the Gush leadership's recent confrontation with Premier Begin. He is interviewed by political correspondent MARK SEGAL.

NEW VOICE FOR A YOUNG HAWK

MORE THAN MOST people in the National Religious Party, Dr. Yehuda Ben-Meir, 38, represents its new image. Together with Ze'evulun Hammer, his fellow leader of the party's Youth Wing, he engineered the rise to power of the Young Turks and the switch to the Likud. Hammer became Education Minister, and Ben-Meir, NRP Knesset faction chairman.

Ben-Meir also speaks for the thousands of educated Bnei Akiva graduates who have become radicalized in recent years. He was head of the Psychology Department at Bar-Ilan University before he entered the Knesset. An active member of the Defence and Foreign Affairs Committee, he was mentioned as likely to succeed its chairman, Prof. Moshe Arens, if the latter joined the Cabinet.

In an interview with The Jerusalem Post, Ben-Meir expressed apprehension about parts of the U.S.-Israel working paper, wondering whether Israel's agreement to admit Palestinians to the negotiations was not a fatal mistake. Despite assurances of U.S. guarantees about there not being a PLO presence at Geneva, he is far from happy.

At the same time he is more prepared to accept any compromise made by the Begin Government than he would have been with the last government. He explained that because the Likud-NRP coalition is so firm on substantive issues, it can afford to be flexible on tactical and procedural matters. Rabin was so willing to give in on basic principles, he argued, that any procedural concession would have been taken as total capitulation. Ben-Meir hoped that the U.S. realizes what kind of government it is dealing with, and that President Carter will not suppose that it would ever agree to a Palestinian state.

"Carter has to understand that flexibility has its limits," the NRP leader said, adding: "I know we have to walk a very tight rope in- deed. We have to follow a line of give-and-take with the U.S."

THE AMERICAN-BORN MK regretted that his faith in U.S. promises had been badly shaken by the recent behaviour towards Israel of President Carter and his National Security Adviser, Prof. Brzezinski. "I have always been an advocate of U.S.-Israel friendship, so I was absolutely staggered by the way the U.S. Administration behaved after its joint statement with the Soviets. It badly damaged American credibility."

He hoped that Carter would now cleave to his promises, and argued that in post-Watergate America credibility has assumed central importance, especially since Carter focused on this issue during his election campaign. Ben-Meir was confident that U.S. public opinion would not allow any further erosion in commitments to Israel. If it comes to a crunch, Israel should take the matter to the American public and explain the worthlessness of any peace settlement based on broken promises.

As to why Israel should rush to Geneva in keeping with Carter's Christmas schedule, Ben-Meir said: "This country cannot afford to create the impression that it is dodging peace talks."

Asked to comment on the charge made by Senators Moynihan and Case that State Department officials have sought to persuade Iran to stop oil supplies to Israel in order to soften up Jerusalem, he remarked: "I can say I told you so, for I voted against the interim agreement with Egypt. Why did we not insist on keeping the oil-fields until a peace treaty was signed, and not just for American promises? This was one of our greatest mistakes, and Yitzhak Rabin has a lot to answer for."

Yet I find it too Machiavellian even for a Brzezinski, I am sure that the U.S. Congress and American public opinion would not allow its government to carry out such a

His vision calls for the cities being near, but not in the main Arab population centres. He would like to see copies of Upper Nazareth in Ma'ale Adumim, Eilat, Omer and Ma'ale.

"Once these cities are established, we will be able to sleep more easily. No one will be able to remove them," he emphasized.

The NRP leader is convinced that this Government will direct funds to these cities and encourage young couples, new immigrants, and so on to settle there by granting them special tax concessions.

No, he does not like to bear Gush Emunim described as a threat to orderly government and to Israeli democracy, because its supporters are close to his movement. At the same time he is unhappy about the recent performance of its leadership, during its confrontation with the Premier.

"I do have reservations about its leaders' conduct," he admitted.

"More I will not say in Ben-Meir is convinced supporters of Gush Emunim never allow themselves manipulated as an anti-force; nor will they be political party. He points to the end of Gush Emunim government authority. When I pressed the leader on whether his movement might not be termed 'ar peace,' he replied that would not come from Samaria being returned rule, but rather through protecting itself from the east, and with Jews living together peacefully.

READERS' LETTERS

PARENTS' INVOLVEMENT IN SCHOOLS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — As so crisply reported by Susan Bellos on October 2, Education Ministry's Eliezer Shmueli "issued a mild warning to parents against meddling in school affairs." I should like to issue a mild warning back. I am not sure that he should be meddling in our children's affairs. Mr. Shmueli is looking for ways to bring parents into the schools. I think we should look for a way to bring him out of them. He thinks we could help with the painting and cleaning, but decisions about school policy, curriculum and firing of teachers should not be our concern. Is the man joking? Does he believe that our children are of such small concern to us that what they learn and whom they learn it from, is not our business?

More lectures will be given for interested parents this year. Lectures about what, I wonder — cleaning and painting the walls of the schools? Surely even he must have noticed that in classes of 40-plus children, teachers need all the aides they can get?

Eliezer Shmueli and Dr. Ya'el Posner have mentioned the "very positive phenomenon of parents' involvement," on the one hand, but they don't want it too close — such as in the classroom, for instance. They just rely on parents helping with the homework because the teacher fails to cope with the size and range of the class.

Parents are also expected to contribute to the school expenses. Books, uniforms, stationery, art equipment, money for excursions, outfitting of children's shoes, etc. — even for the cupboard to keep the books off their children's backs. Parents are willing to do their share, but if Eliezer Shmueli's ministry continues this way, I predict that his classrooms will soon be empty.

Using children for political ends is a disgusting business anywhere, any time. But if it is done with our children in Israel, then we, the concerned parents, can also manipulate them. We can keep them at home until the schools are suitable for them to attend. I do not refer to the premises whether painted or cleaned, but to the quality of the teachers and what they are teaching. I refer to the size of the class and the mixture of children in it.

ASSIMILATION AND ANTI-SEMITISM

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — I consider the publication of Mr. Ashmori's interview (September 30) singularly ill-timed. We, and here I refer to those of us who don't consider Jewish feeling "dangerous," as Mr. Ashmori does, have come to realize that assimilation is one of the most serious problems confronting us. It is an inappropriate "demonstration" of literary freedom to publish such an interview, when all efforts should be directed to stem the tidal wave of assimilation which threatens to engulf us.

After reading the interview, it became clear to me that Mr. Ashmori knows little about Judaism. His primary concern seems to be the saving of his own skin from the hands of anti-Semites. If Mr. Ashmori indeed believes that, through assimilation, he can sidestep anti-Semitism, then it indicates conclusively that he knows much more science than history.

THE PALESTINIANS AND GENEVA

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — A peace conference on the Middle East question can never achieve positive results if it avoids the main issue of the Middle East conflict, which is the Palestinian nation.

Neither the Israelis nor the Americans nor the Arab states have the right to decide on the future of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. These are Palestinian territories inhabited by Palestinian people, and international society recognizes this fact. The creation of a Palestinian State on these territories is an immediate necessity for the Palestinian people, especially those who live in these territories.

With regard to Geneva, no Palestinian has the right to participate in a conference, in any form, without obtaining prior American and Israeli acceptance of the principle of withdrawing from the Bank and Gaza Strip a them over to represent Palestinian Nation. Gene be the grounds for modalities of this trans issue of the Palestinian territories forming a Jewish State.

So if the Geneva conf. be reconvened, the Arab and their leaders have to that they cannot claim a territory by referring it which has no material it up and no logical re have to understand Palestinians beside who and will have to live are beings with human right Jerusalem.

IRRIGATION OF THE DESERT

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — I refer to your article of September 8 about irrigation of the desert, and Dr. Elisabeth Boyko's letter of October 5 on the same subject.

Dr. Boyko is too modest: she and her late husband, Dr. Hugo Boyko, were a scientific team. Together, they conducted elaborate experiments in Beit Dagon localities; they used salt water in a variety of November 1949, they were experimenting with plants doing so, created what was considered to be the ideal climatic conditions lush and beautiful park.

FRENCH JEWRY'S SUPPORT OF ISRAEL

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — I read with surprise Jack Maurice's "Letter from Paris" of September 11, which contains several errors.

Chief Rabbi Jacob Kaplan took a position in support of Zionism 40 years ago. As far back as 1937, in a Personal sermon which caused quite a sensation, the Chief Rabbi of France urged French Jews to support Zionism. Mr. Memmi was probably unaware of this, since he was still in North Africa at the time.

What is more surprising is that Mr. Memmi ignores two statements issued by the chief rabbi which appeared in all the newspapers. One statement, dated June 28, 1967 and issued together with the Jewish Coordinating Committee, protested against the fact that General de Gaulle had branded Israel as the aggressor after the Six Day War. The other statement, dated November 29, 1967, protested against General de Gaulle's slur on Israel, when he called the Jews "a self-assured and dominating elite."

Moreover, the chief rabbi made a speech in the main synagogue of Paris on January 18, 1970, in the presence of the representative of the French President and other officials, in which he strongly protested against the sale of the Mirages by France to Libya. This speech resulted in a lively discussion in the press, particularly in "Le Monde."

I am therefore astonished that Mr. Memmi should have said: "Even Chief Rabbi Jacob Kaplan today adopts public positions in favour of Israel," as if this were a new development. The same applies to the claim that, until the early 60's, the French "Jewish establishment" did not have the "political courage and dignity" to intervene on behalf of Israel.

Before the war of 1966, on January 15 of that year, the Central Consistory published a statement in the press protesting against the threats to which Israel was being subjected. The following year, on January 25, 1977, the Representative Council of French Jewish Organizations publicly supported Israel's demand for guarantees of freedom of navigation in the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Akaba.

EGGED SERVICE IN GILO

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — On September 21, The Jerusalem Post published an article concerning the public outcry by the residents of the Jerusalem suburb of Gilgo against the lack of adequate bus service. The demonstration consisted of a dedicated cadre of individuals halting traffic both to and from Gilgo.

Shortly thereafter, bus service improved dramatically, but for no more than one week. It has once again plummeted to its previous depths, with long waits (in some instances, greater than 45 minutes) and consequent overcrowding.

In a country where people are so dependent on public transport, the service provided by Egged usually amounts to nothing less than a national disgrace that demands immediate rectification.
